Good News Now

"People want to feel hopeful, they want to feel as if they can actually change something for the better. They want solutions to problems broken down in such a way they could envision themselves, or their community enacting those solutions to affect real change." - Crystal Storm

- 01 People want Good News. Instagram accounts such as Tanks Good News, Good News Movement, and Upworthy have over 2 million followers each. The book Utopia for Realists is an International Best Seller
- 02 Practical Good News Solutions that walk people through implementation in their own communities will make people feel hopeful and inspire the action oriented gen-z's and millennials.
- 03 Mainstream media is fatalistic and boring. We solve both those problems with a high level of entertainment and positivity by turning each episode into a Good News Competition!

Good News Solutions...

Newscasts will highlight practical stories of local communities, individuals, and groups, making a positive difference in the world. What does that look like?

- Solutions to common persistent problems such as global warming, systematic racism, ableism, and/or others. We will find the stories where people have come together to solve these problems in their corners of the world and show what worked.
 - The Success of Radical Ideas. Is UBI crazy? What about free health care? Free college? TOVGNN will find relatable stories where ideas that seem improbable are being enacted to great success to reignite our desire for Utopia, whatever that means for us.
 - You can do it too! TOVGNN will go the extra mile during each broadcast to offer ways to contact each story featured on the news so solutions can be shared and action can be taken. People will leave each broadcast feeling hopeful. For action takers they'll have clear steps on how they can bring these solutions into their day to day.

...But Fun!

Let's face it, newscasts can be boring. TOVGNN solves that problem by presenting the good news in a highly entertaining way: through a competition.

- The three cast members a.k.a Good News Reps compete with each other in an amusing fashion. No Good News Story is put down, but rather presented as “my good news is better than yours because...”
- Good News Rep are selected for their diversity, ability to improv, and engaging personality
- Each good news story is judged/presented on predetermined criteria, such as:
 - Ease of implementation
 - Number of people needed to complete
 - Time to completion
 - How many people it helps
- A live poll will run over the course of the show and for 24 hours afterwards. At the end of each show, the Host/Judge will tell the audience which good news solutions she believes won that week, and the audience decides whether or not they agree with her. The audience ultimately picks the winner, announced at the beginning of the next broadcast.
